The event will be held at the indigenous community of Cheran, Michoacan. NAEAP participants are in the process of defending their territories and livelihoods against large industries and infrastructure developments (dams, mining operations, road building, industrial farming, and large housing projects). In addition to social, economic and human health impacts from such activities, the communities are experiencing consequences from the national/regional public policies that threaten to destroy the local social tissue and the everyday life of individuals and communities as a whole, through the privatization of public services
